700 Laymen Study At Yeshiva For Two Weeks

Seven hundred laymen put aside their day-to-day concerns and entered the halls of the Ponevez Yeshiva at Bnai Brak, Israel, where they intensely discussed intricate points of ancient Jewish law. Merchants, executives, professional men, government officials, laborers, soldiers, and politicians thus began two weeks in a Talmudic academy.

In opening the seminary to laymen, Rabbi Yosef Kahaneman revived an ancient practice. The first yeshivas nearly 2,000 years ago were academies where laymen met for two months a year, says the New York Times. Only later did they become full-time educational institutions.

Most of the laymen at Ponevez were yeshiva students in their youth. "Those were the best years of my life," observed David Kinast, 38 years old, a butcher of Kfar Ata. In Kfar Ata, Mr. Kinast studies the Talmud daily with a small group in the village synagogue. But at Ponevez, he studies in much greater depth under great Talmudic scholars.

His program is rugged. At 6:45 a.m., he is in the school's synagogue for the morning service, which is followed by Rabbi Kahaneman's first lecture. At breakfast, he discusses the lesson with other students. Classes resume after breakfast and continue with interruptions for meals, prayers and a brief rest until 8:30 p.m.

The most stimulating discussions stem from Talmudic rulings that seem to be conflicting. Since Talmudic law is regarded as having come from the Almighty contradictions are not believed to exist. Any incomprehensible writings are regarded as reflecting the limitations of the human brain, says the New York Times. These puzzles present interesting challenges, such as the following:

The question raised in one tractate, or treatise, under study was when precisely does day end. The answer was that the appearance of stars marks the end of a day. But in another tractate dealing with another matter the disappearance of the sun's rays makes it possible to see the stars. Still other tractates dealing with laws of the Sabbath and the start of a new month ruled that the holiday laws became effective in the twilight period, when the sun had set but its rays were still visible. Hence, the implication is that day ends at Sunset.

A contradiction! No, said the rabbis. The other tractates deal with the borderline between one day and the next, which is at midnight in the Christian world. In Jewish law it is at twilight, in accordance with the passage in Genesis: "And there was evening and there was morning, a second day."

Why are the students so fascinated by this hair splitting? "It's like a warm shower," observed

400-Unit Housing To Honour Stephen Wise

A public housing project to be known as The Stephen Wise Houses will be built within the West Side urban renewal area. The 400-unit, state-subsidized development will extend from Ninetieth to Ninety-first Street and cover the middle five-eighths of the block between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues.

William Reid, chairman of the project, said the development would commemorate the leadership of the late Rabbi Stephen S. Wise in civic movements in New York and his leadership in world-wide Jewish affairs.

Brought to New York from Hungary when he was a year old, Stephen Wise later attended the public schools and was graduated from Columbia College at the age of 18. He received his Doctor of Philosophy degree from Columbia University in 1901. Rabbi Wise founded the Free Synagogue in 1907, says the New York Times. Now known as the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue, it is at 30 West Sixty-eighth Street.

On the 100th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth, in 1909, he was one of the signers of the "Lincoln Birthday Call" that led to the formation of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Rabbi Wise also was a founder, with the late Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis, of the American Jewish Congress. It is said he liked to note that he was born on St. Patrick's Day — March 17, 1874. He died in 1949.

Mr. Reid said that the project was in preliminary planning and that the construction details, including height of buildings, had not been decided. It is estimated that the total development cost will be $8,170,000 and that the apartments will be ready for occupancy in 1963.

The site extends 200 feet from Ninetieth to Ninety-first Street and has about 500 feet of frontage, beginning 150 feet west of Columbus Avenue and extending to 150 feet east of Amsterdam Avenue. The city has not yet acquired the site. It is now occupied by old apartment houses and tenements and by brownstones, some of which have become rooming houses. St. Sylvia's Convent also is in the site.

The Housing Authority has not decided where to locate the 200 extra public housing units that are be built within the twenty-block West Side urban renewal area under the amended renewal plan approved by the City Planning Commission in the Summer. It is possible that The Stephen Wise Houses will be enlarged by increasing the height of the buildings. The authority also is considering an additional project of 200 units in the block south of Ninetieth Street.

The buildings fronting on Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues will be razed under the urban renewal plan for private re-development and parking bays, says the New York Times. The West Side renewal plan envisions the rehabilitation and some demolition and new construction in the area from Eighty-seventh to Ninety-seventh Street between Amsterdam Avenue and Central Park West.

It has been estimated that at least $100,000,000 of Federal, city and private money would be

Ben-Gurion Will Have Greater Strength Than Before

Premier David Ben-Gurion's Mapai party won at least six new seats in Israel's Knesset (parliament) and pooled the largest vote in the state's eleven-year history. The Premier's party was assured of forty-six seats out of 120. With the three seats won by the Israeli Arab parties associated with Mapai, Mr. Ben-Gurion will have greater strength in the Knesset than ever before, says the New York Times.

But his party was still short of a majority, and, as he has in the previous three Knessets, Mr. Ben-Gurion will have to form a coalition to govern. However, with his new strength, his choice of partners will be much easier and he will have greater freedom of action than at any time in the past.

The balloting, in which more than 80 per cent of the eligible voters participated, produced no radical changes in the alignment of the Knesset. Eleven of the twelve parties represented in the third Knesset have again won seats. The exception was one of the small Arab parties.

The surprise in the voting was the surge of Mapai, which had been expected only to hold the forty seats it had before. Another unexpected result was the failure of Herut, the extreme Right-wing party, to make a substantial gain. With an expected sixteen seats it was still the second largest party. But as the leading Opposition group, it had been expected to capitalize on the discontent that usually develops against a Government long in power.

Mapai's gain was made largely at the expense of the General Zionists, who call themselves the Free Enterprise party, and Ahdut Avodah, one of two Left-wing labor parties, says the New York Times. The Communists, who held six seats in the last Knesset, also suffered a significant drop in percentage of votes, which may cost them two or three seats.

Two groups of religious parties polled approximately the same percentage of votes as before. Between them they controlled seventeen seats in the third Knesset. Much of the credit for Mapai's success was given to the younger men appearing on its list of candidates for the first time, who bore the brunt of the campaigning.

Both Moshe Dayan, former Chief of Staff, and Abba Eban, former Ambassador to the United States, were elected. So was Shimon Peres, former Director General of the Defense Ministry and architect of Israel's alliance with France.

Of 947,213 votes cast, Mapai got 337,524 of those counted by tonight. This was 38.5 per cent of the total. In the last election Mapai had 32.2 per cent.

Herut was second with 13.37 per cent, compared with 12.6 per cent last time. In third place was the National Religious Front (Mizrachi) with 9.97 per cent. Mapam was fourth with 7.21 per cent and the General Zionists fifth with 6.1 per cent, says the New York Times.

Ahdut Avodah, the Torah Religious Front (Agudat Israel), the Progressives, the three Arab Bapai parties and the Communists followed in that order.

Library Is On Relation Of Germany To Her Jews

Fourteen years after the fall of the Nazi regime, an institution has been established in Cologne, dedicated to "bringing light to the questions of the relation of Germany to her Jewish population," according to Deutsche Korrespondenz, published in Bonn.

The initial stimulus to create "Germania Judaica" was given by Heinrich Boell and Paul Schallueck, two of the foremost authors of Germany's younger generation. The library, opened recently, is supported financially and morally by the city of Cologne and the North Rhine-Westphalia government.

The new library has as its goal the presenting of a collection of material covering 2,000 years of German Jewish life. German state and city archives can contribute little in this respect as the greatest part of Jewish cultural documentation was burned by the Nazis.

The founders have, therefore, been forced to turn to private support, says the New York Times. They hope to acquire the library of the Jewish philosopher, Moses Mendelssohn. In addition to numerous portraits of Mendelssohn's contemporaries, the library contains more than 1,500 volumes.

West German publishers will supply the library with post-war publications. Much of the material collected by this "special" library in Germany, which considers itself a branch of the Wiener Library in London, will be made available to readers throughout Germany through other libraries. The library also plans a periodical, an information quarterly and talks and lectures.

The Jewish community in Berlin, the city government, opened a new Jewish community center as a memorial of reconciliation, tolerance and understanding, says the New York Times. The building, which cost the city government 2,000,000 marks (about $478,200), is to become the center of Jewish cultural life in the city and a future meeting place for Jewish and non-Jewish citizens.

It stands on the site of the former synagogue, in downtown

Lemkin, Law Professor, Waged Campaign To End Mass Murder Of Body And Mind

Dr. Raphael Lemkin, of 504 West 112th Street, New York, a leader in the international movement to outlaw genocide, died of a heart attack. His age was 58 years. Dr. Lemkin had been spending the summer in Spring Valley, N.Y., where he was at work on his autobiography, which would have been called "Unofficial Man." He left there to go to New York on business concerning the book. He died the next day in the public relations office of Milton H. Blow at 375 Park Avenue.

The title for Dr. Lemkin's autobiography came from an editorial in The New York Times two years ago congratulating him on his "fifty-sixth victory," says the Times. The occasion was Pakistan's becoming the fifty-sixth country to accept the United Nations Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide.

Referring to Dr. Lemkin as "that exceedingly patient and totally unofficial man," The Times editorial reviewed his private campaign to end mass killing of body and mind for national, ethnic, racial, or religious reasons.

Since the approval of the Genocide Convention by the United Nations General Assembly in Paris on December 9, 1948, the Soviet Union and some of its satellites joined the list of countries that ratified it. However, the United States has not accepted it in the belief that it would infringe on the sovereignty of the U.S.

In 1953, Dr. Lemkin asked the United Nations to find the Soviet Union and its satellites guilty of having violated the pact because of their attempts to exterminate minorities behind the Iron Curtain. He based his case on Communist persecution of Jews.

The Nazi persecution of Jews more than a decade before had given emphasis to Dr. Lemkin's original campaign to end wholesale slaughter of any particular group. He took into account Nazi programs of sterilization and forced abortion for Jews before World War II and the gas-chamber murders that continued their program in concentration camps.

Dr. Lemkin reviewed the situation in his book, "Axis Rule in Occupied Europe," published in 1944 by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, says The New York Times. In this book, the word "genocide" is said to have been used for the first time to describe the sort of mass killings that had been occurring throughout history.

The author explained that he had coined the word from the Greek "genos" (race) and the Latin "cide" (killing). He wrote the book as a Polish refugee in Sweden where he and his brother, Elias, now a resident of Montreal, Quebec, were the sole survivors of their family, which had been wiped out after the Nazi invasion of Poland in 1939. He was a bachelor.

Dr. Lemkin had been in private law practice then in Warsaw. Previously he had served from 1929 to 1935 as secretary of the Committee on Codification of the Laws of the Polish Republic.

The son of a farmer, he was born in Bezwodene in eastern Poland. He held degrees from the Universities of Lwow and Heidelberg and was fluent in nine languages. Appalled by the massacre of a million Armenians by the Turks after World War I and later of the Christian Assyrians by Iraq, Dr. Lemkin went before the League of Nations in 1933 to propose a treaty to ban such mass slaughter. His mission was a failure.

When he came to the United States in 1941, he taught law at Duke University, and served also as an adviser to the War Department. He later was adviser to the late Justice Robert Jackson, chief United States prosecutor at the Nuremberg war crime trials.

In a personal campaign of writing and speaking, Dr. Lemkin was able to persuade United Nations delegates to propose a resolution making genocide a crime under international law. He helped in the drafting of the original resolution 1946, thus leading to the convention approved two years later.

He was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize in 1950 and

Is First Surgeon To Get Heart Award And Prize

Dr. Robert E. Gross, a Boston heart surgeon, was named as the 1959 winner of the Albert Lasker Award of the American Heart Association "for distinguished achievement in the field of cardiovascular research."

Dr. Gross, who performed the first successful operation on an inborn cardiovascular defect in 1938, received a $2,500 prize and a gold statuette of The Winged Victory of Samothrace at the Heart Association's annual scientific meeting at Philadelphia, Pa. The awards committee said that Dr. Gross, the first surgeon to be thus honored, had placed heart surgery on "a firm clinical basis," assuring the saving of thousands of lives.

He is the seventh winner of the award which was established by the Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation and the Heart Association in 1953, says the New York Herald Tribune. He is a Ladd Professor of Children's Surgery at Harvard Medical School; surgeon-in-chief at The Children's Hospital, Boston; and a founder of the Board for Thoracic Surgery.

MARRIAGES

GREENSPOON-APPLE

The marriage of Miss Harriet Apple, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Apple, 834 Stuart Avenue, to Leonard Greenspoon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Greenspoon, 2440 Bedford Road, took place at Beth David-Beth Yitzchok-Kehal Jeshurun Synagogue, on Monday, September 7, at half-past six o'clock. Rabbi Isaac J. Teicher officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was gowned in white satin, designed with a tight, fitted bodice, made with a scalloped neckline; long sleeves, ending with points at the wrists; and a full, bouffant skirt. Her three-quarters length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a coronet of seed pearl beads and rhinestones; and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and satin streamers, on a white bible. Mrs. Clarence Gleason, sister of the bride, was matron of honour, wearing a cerise-pink-shaded, double tiered, organza gown. She had a tiara of rhinestones; and carried a cascade of pink and white carnations. Sherri Claire Gleason, niece of the bride; and Merle Greenspoon, nice of the groom, were flower girls. They were dressed alike in pink organdy, embossed with white flowers; and had floral headpieces of pink and white carnations; and carried nosegays of matching flowers. Arthur Greenspoon, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Morton Apple, Marvin Waxman, Donald Greenspoon, Harvey Farovitch, David Senenbaum, Philip Guthers and Samuel Golden. Monte Richard Gleason, nephew of the bride, was page boy. Standards of white and pink gladioli and chrysanthemums, arranged with greenery, decorated the Synagogue and hall. Mrs. George Apple, mother of the bride, received, in a blue chiffon gown, with blue accessories; and a blue, feathered hat. Mrs. Harry Greenspoon, mother of the groom, was in a beige organza gown; with a hat of matching feathers; both having corsages of pink orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Greenspoon spent their wedding trip at the Nevele Country Club, in Ellenville, N.Y., the bride travelling in a two-piece, beige, mohair suit. They have taken up residence at 4850 Courtral Street. Here for the marriage were: Alec Apple and son, Daniel Apple; and Miss Helene Apple, all of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Langwald, of Miami, Florida; Mr. and Mrs. Moe Summers of Brooklyn, N.Y.; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Berg, of New York.

BAR-MITZVAHS

Success Story: From $2.50 A Week To Owner

Maurice Spector, board chairman of the Blum Store, women's apparel, died in his apartment in Philadelphia, Pa. He was 78 years old. Mr. Spector began his business career as a cashboy in the Hutzler Brothers department store in his native Baltimore. His pay was $2.50 a week, says the New York Times. Later he joined the Baltimore Bargain House, famous all over the South, and worked there until he decided to go into business for himself with a capital of $500.

In 1920, Mr. Spector bought the Blum Store in Philadelphia. He served as president until 1954, when he became chairman of the board. The concern has an outlet there and in Bala-Cynwyd.

Over the years, Mr. Spector served as vice president of the Philadelphia Merchant Association; a member of the board of the Better Business Bureau; and a member of the executive board of the Chestnut Street Association. For a number of years, he was a director of the ready-to-wear division of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

A member of the board of Congregation Adath Jeshurun; the overseers of the Jewish Theological Seminary; and the executive board of the Association of Jewish Children, Mr. Spector had served also as an honorary director of the Allied Jewish Appeal. He was national vice chairman of the Joint Defense Appeal National Council, the fund-raising group of the American Jewish Committee; and the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith. He was also a member of the executive committee of the Philadelphia chapter for Brandeis University; and the Locust Club.

Surviving are his widow, the former Annie Kass; a daughter, Mrs. Sarabelle Herr; a son, Herman; two brothers, John and Abraham; and three grandchildren.

On the occasion of the bicentenary of Canadian Jewry the Congress jointly with the Jewish Public Library, of Montreal, is publishing a selected listing of books and pamphlets on the Jewish community which is being compiled by David Rome, director of the library and curator of the Bronfman Collection of Jewish Canadiana housed in that institution. The Selected Bibliography of Jewish Canadiana will list some 2,000 titles written or edited by Canadian Jews as well as books and pamphlets about Canadian Jews and titles of books by Canadians on subjects of Jewish interest. Among the sections in the bibliography are: Literature in English, Hebrew and Yiddish, Canadian Jewish history, World-wide Jewish affairs, Jewish sociology, Social Studies by Canadian Jews, The Holy Land, Religion, Civics, Art, Institutions, Education, Group Relations, Science, Jewish education, etc. An introductory note by Samuel Bronfman, president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, appears at the beginning of the work. Canadians who have published books, pamphlets or articles that should be included in the bibliography of Jewish Canadiana or who have been associated with institutions and organizations which have published books or pamphlets are invited to send in copies of such works for inclusion in the bibliography to Mr. Rome at the Jewish Public Library, 4490 Esplanade Avenue, Montreal. Mr. Rome was national press officer of the Congress and its associated institutions for over a decade, edited the Congress Bulletin from its inception until 1958, and was secretary of the Congress committee which concerned itself with relations between the Jewish community and French Canada. He is the editor of the two-volume record "Canadian Jews In World War II", which the Congress published in 1947-48; and of "Our Library, 1914-1957". He is the author of "The First Two Years, A Record Of The Jewish Pioneers On Canada's Pacific Coast, 1858-1860".

BRIEF ENCOUNTER

BY CUNT LEVIANT

A few minutes after our Israeli boat docked at the Greek port of Piraeus, a small Russian steamer pulled in at the pier at right angles to us. With binoculars and the naked eye, everyone strained to see the Russians. Aboard were vacationers, young and old, dressed in sports clothes and suits which would have been in style at any European resort. The young people waved to us.

We had a three-hour shore-leave and boarded special buses which took us to Athens. During the eight-mile trip some of us decided that we wanted to include the Athens synagogue in our itinerary. But most, led by Haya, a young university student, said that there were enough synagogues in Israel. We came only to see Greece, they said. Let's not waste the little time we have here.

Thirty minutes later, at the parking-lot at the Acropolis, we saw a bus with a placard INTOURIST, the official Russian tourist agency. In it their guide was briefing the passengers. Our group continued on through the Acropolis. The austere mood of the area was shattered by the hundreds of tourists scrambling over the ruins and by photographers and souvenir-hawkers. As we returned to our buses, I saw a group of the Russians. I greeted them and hurried down.

At the parking-lot Haya ran up, excited. "I just spoke to some Russian Jews," she said. Immediately she was surrounded. She caught her breath and continued: "I just passed them now. I heard them talking, so I decided to speak to them. One asked me in German where I came from. I said Israel. A man stepped forward. 'I'm from —,' he said, 'I'm a physicist.' I said his German sounded more like my parents' Yiddish, also from the same town. I saw the man's wife start crying. I didn't know what to say."

"Were all of them Jews?" someone asked.

"No. That's it. There were six of them. But the others looked like regular Russians. I gave all of them some Israeli coins and they gave me kopeks. I hope I didn't hurt them by that. They said there were other Jews on board, all intellectuals and professional men."

One of the girls in the group couldn't help poking fun at Haya. "Look how our little anti-Semite is talking now. You avoided a synagogue and found some Jews."

"I swear," Haya said, "I never thought I'd react this way. I'm like all the other sabras who think nothing of the Jews in the Galut. I didn't feel as if they were part of me. But talking to these poor people and seeing their eyes shine when I said Eretz Yisrael, well, something broke right here," she pointed to her heart. "All of those ruins up there — all of Greece — isn't worth a penny compared to the experience I've just had."

Though it was 11 a.m. the sun beat down strongly. A high hot mist hung over Athens and the relics of ancient Greece. I remembered the accounts of the 1957 International Youth Festival in Moscow. Israel was also represented. Though this was announced neither in the press nor on the radio, Jews streamed to the capital from all over the Soviet Union, some traveling as much as two weeks by train from easternmost Samarkand. Word of mouth had spread the news from one end of Russia to the other. The tearful receptions and spontaneous demonstrations of these Russian Jews, young and old, was proof enough of their interest in Israel and the rest of Jewry.

I looked for the Intourist bus but found it empty. It was too late to go back up the hill again. Our bus reloaded and soon we were in Piraeus again.

Wandering around the dock with two friends, I found myself drawn to the Russian boat. I saw some Russian sailors and stewardesses leaning over the rail on the lowest deck, only a few feet above me: square, plain, seemingly characterless faces. Then I noticed a man of about forty, well-dressed and wearing sunglasses, standing among the others. His sensitive face was in stark contrast to the others' Slavic features. On a chance, I said in Yiddish, walking quickly by as if talking to myself, "Does anyone here speak mame loshen (Yiddish)?"

The man leaned forward. I stopped. "Mame loshen," I said again.

He blinked as if not understanding. "German? English?"

"English," I said. "Where does this ship come from — Odessa?"

"We are sailing to Odessa," he said. He had a broad mouth and his constant smile was gold-capped. "From Albania. Where are you going to?"

"Europe! Are you going there too?"

"No. This boat's route is Albania, Greece, and Russia." Every once in a while he told the tall sailor next to him what was being said. "Where are you sailing from?"

I pointed to the Israeli boat. "From Haifa, Israel."

"How is the life there?" he asked.

"Very good."

"Very good you say?"

"Yes. A free life."

He nodded, not saying anything to the sailor.

"Why don't you come down here?" I said. "We might go to a cafe."

"I cannot."

"If it's a question of money, we'll gladly help you," one of my friends said.

"It's not the money. I am not permitted to leave the ship."

I kept looking at his face, his smile, his lips, his hands. Was I speaking to a Russian Jew? Or was this the face of the intellectual the world over?

"Are you a doctor?"

"No. An engineer."

We were silent. I felt that I was staring at him too long and glanced at the other faces. Then I looked back, looking for some hint. But his white teeth, some gold-capped, only smiled. I had the feeling that there was a strain to that constant smile. It was the smile of a man who had to smile.

"What languages do you speak in your country?" he said.

"Hebrew. But many speak English. Everyone must learn it in public school and high school."

The engineer spoke to the sailor, then turned to us. "I listen to your English broadcasts."

"Short wave?"

"Yes. And I would like you to do me a favor. Tell the announcer that he speaks a bit too fast." He laughed.

I tried to study his features, but his sunglasses hid his eyes. His every feature told me, his clouded words told me: I am a Russian Jew. I had to look at his eyes to make sure.

"Would you kindly raise your sunglasses? I would like to see your eyes."

He pushed the glasses to his forehead. I looked deeply into them; he into mine. His eyes were warm, liquid with a touch of sadness. There was no mistake about it now. I felt an untouchable, inexplicable something called contact. I nodded, knowing.

Very slowly he said, "Do you understand?", still with that iron smile. He made a movement with his hands and his eyes disappeared behind the dark glasses.

"I understand," I said and then had to turn around. With my back toward him and the Russians, I whispered to my two friends in Hebrew, "He is Jewish!" and walked straight away from the boat, unable to contain myself. The huge concrete street, which was the dock, glittered endlessly in front of me and I kept walking, the tears streaming from my eyes. At that moment, I deeply understood a scene in the Bible — I knew how Joseph felt when he saw all his brothers assembled around him. I walked around for a few minutes to calm down. Our boat was loading. Only a few minutes remained. I returned quickly to the Russian boat, eager to talk some more.

"Does everyone there speak Hebrew?" he was asking my friends.

"Almost everyone does. Those who don't are learning. But many languages are still spoken there, including mame loshen."

"But the people from the Spanish countries. They don't know mame loshen."

"They have their own — Ladino — a mixture of Spanish with a few Hebrew words."

"I know a few Hebrew words too," the engineer said.

The Russians stood next to him, mute, stone-faced watchdogs who would not go away.

"Would you like some Israeli cigarettes?" I said.

"No, thank you."

"It wouldn't be any trouble. I can run over and bring you some."

"Thank you," he smiled. "It would not be advisable."

"Do the people next to you understand English?"

"They are here, you see," he said, spreading his arms. "I do not know. Thank you very much for the cigarettes."

He stood about six feet above me. Directly in front of me were a set of portholes. Probably the staff quarters. Perhaps there was someone listening.

"Too bad," I said. "I wanted very much for you to have them."

"Yes. It is too bad."

"Perhaps the fact that we're here so long is inconvenient for you."

"I am not alone," he said.

"I know. But perhaps we've been here too long and should say goodbye."

"Perhaps it would be convenient."

We turned and left. Fifteen minutes later our boat was sailing past the Russian steamer. Again their young men and women waved to us.

For a brief moment, there in Greece, the Jews of East and West had met. The Russian Jews had seen an Israeli boat, the flag of Israel, and most of all — Israelis. As for us, we had sailed up the mythical river Sambatyon and mythical river Sambatyon and the Hills of Darkness.

This story is from The Jewish Frontier.

WITNESSES WANTED IN GERMANY FOR RETRIAL OF CAMP GUARDSMAN

Karl Melchior, in 1949, was convicted by the Munich Court of Assizes of several murders committed as a guardsman at the former concentration Camp Janowska near Lemberg, in Poland "Deutsche Ausrustungswerke", and sentenced to penal servitude for life. In 1954, a retrial was ordered and Melchior was discharged. In the interest of a retrial initiated by Public Prosecution with Regional Court Munich I against this former guardsman for several murders, internees of the former camp "Deutsche Ausrustungswerke" at Janowska near Lemberg confined there during the years 1940-1943 are wanted as witnesses. Who was interned in the "DAW" camp at Janowska? Any persons in a position to give information are requested to answer to the Central Bureau of the Federal Republic of Germany, Wiesbaden, Trunkweg/Postfach 1007, and all instructions will come from Germany.

Pernica, 53 Ranee Avenue; and of Mr. and Mrs. L. Halberstadt, 1 Marquette Avenue.

MARRIAGES

DAVIS-GROSSMAN

The marriage of Miss Denise Irene Grossman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Grossman, 325 Rosemary Drive, to Dr. Jay Harvey Davis, son of Mrs. Davis and the late Isaac Davis, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., at Beth Tzedec Synagogue, on October 27, at half-past five o'clock, was solemnized by Rabbi Stuart Rosenberg. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a long gown of ivory-shaded peau de sole, fashioned with a fitted basque of Brussels lace jewelled with pearl-beads, and a broad neckline; a cummerbund of crushed silk; and a bouffant skirt which had a jewelled panel of lace and pearl-beads. Appliques of lace and pearl-beads trimmed the back of the skirt which had a regency train. A Swedish coronet of pearl-beads held her illusion veil, and she carried white orchids with streamers of ivy. The matron of honour was Mrs. Saul Davis, sister-in-law of the bride. Her gown of gold and taupe brocade was embroidered in a leaf pattern, and had a halter neckline, pleated bodice, and bouffant skirt. Her headpiece was a taupe cap veil; and her flowers were white roses and baby chrysanthemums. The junior bridesmaids were: Susan Grossman, sister of the bride; and Rhonda Davis, sister of the groom. Each wore a gown of white silk organza over pink taffeta, with a Peter Pan collar; puffed sleeves, and a full skirt with a pink sash draped in the back. Their tiaras were of white and pink velvet; and they carried nosegays of white roses and baby chrysanthemums. Saul Davis, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Larry Grossman, Marvin Turk, Sheldon Taerk, Wilfred Davis, Dr. Alan Green, Dr. Bernard Crystal, Marvin Grossman, Bernard Bassett, Donald Jubas, and Gary Gutmann. The Synagogue was decorated with standards of white chrysanthemums. Mrs. Grossman wore a long gown of pink and mushroom-coloured satin, made with a beaded bodice, square neckline, and sheath skirt; and had a matching hat; and a white orchid corsage. Mrs. Davis wore a long gown of beige lace and chiffon, styled with a round neckline, cap sleeves, and full skirt. Her feathered hat matched it; and she had a white orchid corsage. Dr. and Mrs. Jay Harvey Davis spent their wedding trip in New York; Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Haiti. The bride travelled in a brown dress; with hat to match, and a mink stole; and a white orchid corsage.

CLASS IN COOKERY

three pounds fresh or frozen ocean perch fillets one-quarter cup salad oil salt and pepper to taste

Allow frozen fillets to thaw on refrigerator shelf over night. Place fillets skin side down on preheated broiler rack. Brush with oil, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Broil for about five minutes, then turn. Brush again with oil. Continue broiling until fish will just flake when tested with a fork, about ten minutes per inch thickness of fish. Remove to hot platter, garnish with lemon wedges and parsley and serve with mixed vegetables. This serves six.

Mrs. I. Muscott.
1218 Bishop Street, Montreal.

SPONGE CAKE

nine eggs
one and one-half cups white sugar one-half cup orange juice
one and one-half cups all purpose flour two teaspoons baking powder one tablespoon oil.

Separate eggs. In small bowl beat yolks of eggs with one-half cup of sugar. Add orange juice. In large bowl beat whites of eggs until firm and gradually beat in the remaining one cup of sugar. Sift flour and baking powder together three times. Add egg yolk mixture to the egg white mixture, then fold in flour and baking powder. Add gradually one tablespoon of oil. Bake in nine-inch tube pan at 350 degrees for one hour, or until golden brown. Let stand in inverted pan until cool.

And why not?
They were Heinz VEGETARIAN Beans

(And Goldilocks was hungry!) They looked so good--and smelled so good—and TASTED SO GOOD! The truth is—who can resist 'em—young or old? And what mother can resist the priceless satisfaction of seeing children eat their way to health with every spoonful of these energy-packed beans? They're so easy to prepare, too. Just heat and serve. Tonight.

MONTREAL MEETINGS

(Additional Montreal Meetings on Pages Four and Five)

● NATIONAL COUNCIL ● of Jewish Women gave its angels' ball at the Windsor Hotel with twelve hundred guests present, under the distinguished patronage of the Prime Minister of Canada, the Right Honorable John Diefenbaker, and Mrs. Diefenbaker. Present were: the Honourable Marc Drouin, Speaker of the Senate, and Mrs. Drouin; His Worship the Mayor of Montreal, Senator Sarto Fournier, and Mrs. Fournier; and Dr. Michael Simon, Consul General of Israel, and Mrs. Simon. Convened by Mrs. Joseph Hopmeyer, the ball will benefit numerous community projects of the council. Patrons' contributions will be directed to the largest undertaking, the Senior Citizens project. Blue and gold decorated reception halls and Peacock Alley; garnet-red and white, the banquet halls. Numerous seven-foot white angels in blue tulle formed an outline along Peacock Alley and the fireside lounge. Pink spotlights cast a rosy hue. Two over-sized white trees sprayed with iridescent gold dust marked the staircase. A champagne reception was held in the Dauphin Suite for honoured guests and patrons. The buffet had arrangements of white chrysanthemums and Happiness roses. A cocktail party was held for all guests. The receiving line was headed by Philip Vineberg and Mrs. Vineberg who is president of the Montreal Section of Council; and the Honourable Marc Drouin and Mrs. Drouin, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hopmeyer, Mayor and Mrs. Fournier, Dr. and Mrs. Simon, Benjamin Robinson, Q.C., and Mrs. Robinson, Lazarus Phillips, Q.C., and Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Sydney Levitt, Mrs. Samuel Hart. Dinner was served in Windsor Hall and the Versailles Ballroom. Garnet-red roses, centered with white candles and angel cut outs, formed table decorations. A table of honour was placed down the centre of Windsor Hall and of the Versailles Ballroom to seat the special guests. The ball was opened in Peacock Alley by Senator Drouin and Mrs. Philip Vineberg, Mayor Fournier and Mrs. Hopmeyer. Guests for the ball only, as well as dinner guests, attended a midnight reception in Windsor Hall. A table was set in front of a raised dais of floral arrangements, giving the effect of a sunken garden. Garlands of flowers adorned the front of the buffet table, and horns of plenty poured out fresh fruit for table decoration. The committee for the angels' ball was headed by Mrs. Joseph Hopmeyer, with co-chairmen, Mrs. Jack Cummings and Mrs. Louis Schraiber; and patrons, Mrs. Sydney Levitt and Mrs. Lazarus Phillips. Members were: Mesdames Morton L. Mintz, Aaron Schacter, Robert Cummings, Lawrence Finkelstein, Nell Phillips, J. Jacob Luria of Tel Aviv, a printer and stationary store proprietor. "It's like a cold shower." said Mendel Brendwin, of Tiberias, a Finance Ministry official. A contradiction? Of course not. Mr. Luria finds a hot shower stimulating and Mr. Brendwin is stimulated by a cold shower.

Any part of the poison ivy plant is dangerous, even in fall, when the leaves have dropped. Stem, berries, and root can all cause a painful burning rash, so if there has been any contact with the plant, the skin should be washed with strong household soap or detergent at once.

How The Soviet Government Could Make A Great Contribution

When the United States and the Soviet Union announced an exchange of visits between President Eisenhower and Chairman Khrushchev many groups recognized the possibility for a presentation of a variety of issues.

Understandably, American Jews became concerned with seeking an opportunity to bring the plight of their co-religionists in the Soviet Union to the attention of Mr. Khrushchev. At the outset several groups sought an appointment. In the absence of a single recognized forum this too was understandable. After some negotiations twenty-one major national Jewish organizations, whose names are attached below, undertook to consolidate their approach to the problem.

The concern and attitude of the United States was indicated by the words of the U.S. Secretary of State Mr. Herter, who said: ". . . In the State Department we have requests from a number of different organizations to try to arrange appointments for them with Mr. Krushchev. The Jewish organizations did it individually, asked for an appointment with him, then joined together and asked if they might send a representative to represent all of them to see Mr. Khrushchev. We endorsed strongly that request. . ." (U.N. Press Conference, September 22, 1959).

In the short time available the co-operating organizations faced two tasks: a. To agree on the issues and the position to be taken; b. To select a delegation in the event that Mr. Khrushchev needed the strong representation of the State Department, which was supported by officials in both executive and legislative branches of the Government.

The necessities of the situation were such as to make on-going releases of news, as to steps taken, inadvisable. Now it can be stated that it had been agreed to limit the number of the delegation to five, and that the organizations had indeed reached substantial agreement on the five. Then it became clear that Mr. Khrushchev would not find time for the meeting. Earlier the organizations had reached common ground as to conclusions concerning the position of Soviet Jewry as follows:

1. The estimated number of Jews in the Soviet Union is approximately three million and the Government of the U.S.S.R. has always regarded them as a distinct national and religious group.

2. However, despite the dejure recognition of their status, the Jews are the only religious group which has no nation-wide religious association. There is no comprehensive federation of Jewish communities. As the Soviet authorities themselves demand the existence of such a federation as a condition for the organized construction, supervision and maintenance of houses of prayer and for the manufacture and distribution of articles of religious worship, the denial of the right of federation suffocates the effective operation of Jewish religious life, even in the confines open to other religions. Jews are not permitted to maintain religious associations with Jewish religious organizations outside the Soviet Union, such as the relationship permitted between the Russian Orthodox Church and the World Council of Churches. Soviet Jews are not permitted to teach their children the Hebrew language without which Jewish religious observance is impossible for them. While some synagogues have been allowed to function on a local basis, there have been disturbing reports in recent months, even in this regard. There is authentic information of the closing of synagogues and prayer groups in a number of provincial cities.

3. From the point of view of group culture, the position of the Jews in the Soviet Union has deteriorated sharply in the past twenty years. In the 1930's, Soviet Jews had a widespread system of cultural and educational institutions in the Yiddish language, including schools, theaters, newspapers, a large literary output, cultural and literary clubs and associations. The process of elimination of these institutions reached its climax in the years 1948-1953, when these institutions were closed. (In 1952, scores of leading Jewish writers and other cultural leaders were liquidated.) Since 1953 nothing has been done to restore these rights, which were forcibly suppressed, and which are accorded to all other groups in the Soviet Union, even to tiny and dispersed groups, numbering only a few thousand souls.

4. There also exists a humanitarian problem of broken families, which has resulted from the migrations of recent generations and the dispersed condition of the Jewish people. Many Jews in the Soviet Union are separated from their families elsewhere. Any action by the Soviet Government to alleviate this situation would constitute a great contribution towards better understanding between peoples.

We have reason to believe that these views did reach Mr. Krushchev. What will happen in this connection, as in the case of many other issues, must await the passage of time.

No Polish Jew Goes Hungry, Due To J.D.C. With U.J.A. Funds

None of Poland's 40,000 Jews goes hungry or shelterless today, Charles H. Jordan, Director-General of the Joint Distribution Committee, reported in New York after a ten-day tour of the country. "Conditions today are in marked contrast to what we found when we resumed welfare operations in Poland exactly two years ago," Mr. Jordan said. "We came into the country at the invitation of the Polish government primarily to meet the needs of the thousands of Jews repatriated from Russia. We found, however, that large segments of the settled Jewish population, the aged, the invalided, the unemployable, and their families, were not eligible for relief under existing welfare programs, or that they received a stipend insufficient to meet their needs.

"The program we set in motion served 22,000 men, women, and children this past year. We provided emergency relief, housing assistance, cash grants, feeding programs, medical assistance, vocational training through ORT, religious education and supplies, care of the aged, and support of a summer camp for children."

Funds for JDC's overseas programs are provided chiefly by the United Jewish Appeal. Satisfaction with the results achieved by JDC and ORT during the past two years was expressed by Stanislaw Zawadski, the Polish Minister of Labor and Welfare, in an interview with Mr. Jordan, Max Braude, Director-General of ORT's world-wide vocational training program; and Samuel Haber, JDC Assistant Director-General.

Hunger and malnutrition, a basic problem two years ago, were vanquished by a collaboration between JDC and the Va'ad Hakehiloth, with represents organized Jewish religious life in the country, Mr. Jordan reported. "The Va'ad Hakehiloth also operates fifteen canteens throughout the country where hot kosher meals are served six days a week," he said. "These canteens supplement the cash relief we provide to 7,535 persons a month and our school feeding programs through which more than 2,500 children are served daily. Thus every needy Jew in the country is assured of a daily supply of food."

In addition, regular monthly allocations to the religious congregations have made possible the functioning of 20 Talmud Torahs and have enabled the Va'ad to repair synagogues and purchase necessary religious ceremonial objects, he stated. JDC has also sent books, periodicals, and film material from abroad for use in the religious schools, and is restoring Jewish cemeteries destroyed and defiled by war and vandalism.

Providing the Jewish repatriates from Russia with training and work opportunities is a major phase of the cooperative program of ORT and JDC, Mr. Jordan said. During the last three years 18,000 have returned to Poland, of whom about 6,000 later emigrated to Israel and other countries. The remaining 13,000 are not entitled to any welfare benefits beyond an initial grant. It is for these often destitute families that the ORT and JDC programs have been primarily planned. About 4,600 men and women have been trained in ORT vocational courses during these two years, with JDC providing stipends to cover the living costs of those in need. JDC also made constructive loans to 215 artisans and to 800 members of ten cooperative workshops to enable them to buy the tools and equipment which would make them self-supporting. Almost all of these have been returnees from Russia.

Fasanen Strasse, destroyed by the Nazis during the "crystal night" of November 8, 1938, which got its name from the large amount of glass broken in Jewish shop windows all over Germany.

Speaking in the center's main hall, Willy Brandt, the mayor of West Berlin, called the event a happy day. "Despite past sorrows, present disappointments and certain misgivings for the future, I feel we are progressing on a good way in Berlin," he asserted, says the New York Times. "This place must become a symbol of loving tolerance."

Ernst Lemmer, Minister for All-German Affairs in the West German Cabinet, pledged the Federal Government's "relentless fight against any new return to barbarism."

The original West Side renewal plan had called for 400 low-rent public housing units. Neighborhood protests that this was inadequate to help in relocating tenement dwellers whose homes would be demolished led to the addition of 200 units in the plan.
